

Q4 Playbook: What Winning Lenders Are Doing Differently

The quarter doesn't reward more effort. It rewards fewer gaps.

They audited pricing drift before Q4 started

Stated vs. realized margin, pulled in September, not discovered in December. The lenders who check early catch a guidelines problem. The lenders who don't catch a quarter's worth of lost margin.

They pre-documented their five most common exceptions

Q4 volume means less time per deal. Teams that documented common edge cases in September aren't improvising on them in November.

They know their sellability status before anyone asks

If a capital partner or aggregator called this week, could you produce a clean tape today?
Winning lenders know the answer before Q4's conversations start.

They built systems that don't need slack to function

Q4 removes the cushion that hides gaps the rest of the year. Pricing that's current without a manual check. Reporting that's a pull, not a project.
