

The Sellability Checklist: Is Your Paper Q4-Ready?

If a buyer called today, would your book be ready — or would you need two weeks?

Can you explain your pricing variance?

Similar deals priced differently need a reason attached — market conditions, borrower profile, a logged exception. Unexplained variance reads as risk to a buyer.

Is your documentation standard-format, not reconstructed?

If an analyst needs a call to interpret your servicing data, you're starting the conversation at a disadvantage before the collateral is even discussed.

Do you have 12+ months of consistent pricing history?

A short or inconsistent history makes every deal look like a one-off negotiation instead of a repeatable process a buyer can underwrite.

Can you answer the origination–pause question?

What happens to servicing if you can't originate for 30 days? Buyers ask this routinely. Lenders who've thought it through answer in a sentence, not a scramble.
